NEW RECOMMENDATIONS

Stocks added to our Recommended List.

Insiders continue to generate many more potential new long ideas than red flags with their trading activity, keeping us leaning bullish. Clients should peruse both our Ratings of Latest Purchases on Page 4 for the latest crop of insider-approved stocks, as well as the numerous tables that make up our monthly Special Screens feature starting on Page 18.

We've already added shares of Hercules Offshore (HERO) to our Recommended List on Friday via an email alert. See below for more details.

Hercules Offshore (HERO) @ $4.71

(Recommended Via 2/28 Email Alert)

This major supplier of jackup rigs to drillers in the shallow waters of the Gulf of Mexico (GOM) is facing short-term headwinds to customer demand that have sunk the price of HERO by 40% from highs hit last fall.

Two Hercules Directors have optimistically (and finally) bought their stock's long decline, and we're prepared to follow them. Director Thomas Bates increased his holdings of HERO by 12.8% with his latest Buy. The average 1-year return of his previous four purchases was 31%. Mr. Bates is also a Director at Tetra Technologies (TTI), but he has not purchased those shares in over a year. On a relative basis, he seems to like the appreciation prospects of HERO better than TTI at this point.

Steven Webster is another Director who is on numerous boards in the energy sector, and he also appears to be giving a relative value signal with his most recent acquisitions of HERO. In the past year, Mr. Webster has smartly committed another $465k to Carrizo Oil & Gas (CRZO) and $179k to Basic Energy Services (BAS). But since November, he has invested a much greater $888k in HERO as it weakened, and increased his holdings by over 11% in the process. With several places to put his money in the energy sector, Mr. Webster is obviously choosing to place his most recent bets on HERO.

The latest downdraft in shares of Hercules is likely the result of remarks on the company's recent Q4 conference call acknowledging that contract activity in the GOM "has started the year a little slower than previously anticipated....Given this fact, we have elected to suspend the reactivation of the Hercules 203 until we get more contract coverage on these rigs and greater demand visibility during the second half of 2014, and heading into 2015."

Suspending reactivation of a rig was not expected. Earnings estimates for this year and next were taken down as a result, but the stock declined much more as sentiment on the stock took an even harder hit. HERO now trades for less than 8 times adjusted EPS estimates of $0.60 for 2014, even though that lowered number still represent over 100% growth. Adjusted EPS is also still expected to increase by over 40% in 2015, even though that estimate was similarly lowered.

But despite arguments of HERO being a "value" based on its price-to-book value and expected earnings, we still think HERO is more properly classified as a high-risk/high-return prospect right here and now. Yes: longer-term, the value of HERO is indeed compelling. Short-term, however, investors have already shown that the stock is very sensitive to shifts in sentiment. Investors shouldn't fool themselves that HERO can't go lower first.

Day rates for contracting Hercules' jackup rigs has stopped increasing, and if demand from smaller drillers doesn't pick up--or get replaced by demand from the likes of new, private-equity backed entities--day rates could reverse course. Bears also are shouting loudly about a future EBITDA hit to Hercules based on its need to replace the many old rigs in its inventory.

But the odds of the higher return in HERO playing out appear more likely, and the longer-term prospects of Hercules are well worth any shorter-term trading risk.

"I think sentiment has grown so negative on the offshore deepwater space, that it has also affected shallow water contractors like Hercules," says Matt Marietta at Stephens. He also agrees that "replacing the assets is a logical and applicable concern. But the Gulf has two classes of jackup rigs, and operators I've talked to indicate there will continue to be demand for the older, cheaper rigs Hercules provides."

J.B. Lowe at Cowen Securities suspects the acknowledged slow start to Hercules' 2014

RECOMMENDED LIST

Independent research opinions on stocks I have invested in, after using insider data as a first screen to determine where to focus our fundamental research. The weekly performance of my Recommended List is calculated by averaging the weekly performances of all the positions on the List. Buy and Short-rated stocks are counted as full positions. Hold-rated stocks are counted as half positions. The weekly performance of our List is then further adjusted for the percentage of Cash we are recommending.

is “a pause rather than a cyclical downturn”. He points out that “there has been a good amount of investment by private equity and other operators in [GOM drilling] acreage. These guys are currently putting together drilling programs that will probably start happening within the next twelve months.” Mr. Marietta also views this potential demand as a positive for Hercules because drilling “assets are going from companies whose focus was elsewhere, into the hands of operators committed to the Gulf of Mexico.”

And commenting on short-sellers’ point that Hercules’ rigs are old, Mr. Lowe believes that “the company has time on their side. The rigs are old, but the rigs are still very capable. We think even if they have just another 5 years, that will give Hercules enough time to replace them.”

Based on HERO’s present value and future prospects, Mr. Marietta ranks the stock as one of his top ideas for this year, with a price target of $9. Mr. Lowe is also bullish, though with a price target of $7.

COMPANY UPDATES

Valeant Pharmaceuticals (VRX)

Reiterating Buy.

Recommended: 6/22/12 @ $46.88

Previously Updated: 6/17/13

2/28/14 Price: $144.86

Performance: +209.0% Wks Held: 88

Shares of Valeant Pharmaceuticals continue to march higher as earnings momentum begets stock price momentum. And though the detractors of Valeant’s growth-by-acquisition strategy are growing louder, we reiterate our Buy rating on this solidly out-performing position.

Valeant Pharmaceuticals was a misunderstood firm back in 2009 when we first bought its stock. The company had one foot in the biotech sector and another in retail pharmaceuticals products. But a string of acquisitions solidified the firm as more of a consumer goods play.

We exited our first position in VRX with a near 400% profit in May 2011. We entered it again just over a year later, and our second position in VRX is up over 200%. It is also one of the oldest active Buy recommendations on our List.

For good reason. Valeant’s financial results continue to beat expectations, and give every indication of continuing their longer-term growth trend. Fiscal 2013 results reported a (non-GAAP) EPS increase of 51%, to $6.24. Management has further guided for revenue of $8.2 billion to $8.6 billion in 2014, with non-GAAP EPS rising at least another 32%, to $8.25. As more acquisitions are closed, however, expect guidance to change—and likely for the better.

With Valeant’s very active growth-by-acquisition strategy, there will always be rumblings of the company potentially overpaying for targets, taking on too much debt, and otherwise concern about messy income statements.

That’s fair—but it’s extremely difficult to predict when the fundamental and price momentum in a growth-by-acquisition play will run out. Detractors typically are way early with their bearish calls—if it pans out at all.

Even so, we are not blind to the concerns stemming from active growth-by-acquisition strategies. If fact, when we exited VRX in May 2011, it was due to just such concerns. The firm was only months into its game-changing merger with Canada-based Biovail. Biovail was larger than Valeant at the time, making worries of indigestion much more obvious a concern.

We also had important help in determining that we should finally take our profits in VRX three years ago, from the same well-considered institutional insider that had originally introduced us to the stock: ValueAct Holdings. This renowned institutional investor and value shop, founded by Jeffrey Ubben and Peter Kamin, was a chronic purchaser of VRX between 2007 and 2009. But the firm abruptly became a big seller in 2011 as it—and us—were sitting on our massive profits. Selling turned out to be a good call as VRX did indeed wobble sideways for a good year until mid 2012.

But whatever reticence ValueAct had for taking profits back in 2011, the group decided to put money back into Valeant in 2012 at virtually the same price they took profits at the previous year. Agreeing that Valeant’s digestion was likely over, we bought into VRX for the second time.

So despite the present uptick in rumblings about Valeant’s non-GAAP financial calculations and growth-by-acquisition strategy, it will likely prove more profitable to stay more focused on the actions of ValueAct in VRX, than the words of financial journalists.

For there are also a couple real benefits from Valeant’s growth-by-acquisition strategy. It has brought depth to Valeant’s product lines and diversity to its geographical reliance. These benefits, in turn, have made VRX rightfully less sensitive to individualized pieces of bad news.

For instance, management admitted in Valeant’s Q4 conference call that organic sales (which increased 13% last year) will decline in Q1, due to generic rivals to its Zovirax and Retin-A Micro drugs. Yet VRX still gained ground on the announcement because sales hits from those legacy products will be more than made up for by growth in its newly acquired units, and expected synergies after integrating them. Valeant expects to realize $850 million this year alone in synergy benefits once its Bausch + Lomb acquisition from last year is fully integrated.

While a position in Valeant may not suit very conservative clients, we view it as a solid Buy for investors comfortable with a growth/momentum play in their portfolios.

INSIDE THE MARKET

Our Interpretation of Insiders' Top-Down Sentiment.

Last week saw a second straight week of insiders increasing their selling of the most recent stock rally. Our weekly buy/sell ratio fell to -139% (indicating that there were 138% more companies with insiders selling their shares in the open market versus buying them). That compares with -128% and -66% ratios from one and two weeks ago, respectively. The rolling 4-week average of our insider buy/sell ratios (aka our Insider-Based Market Indicator) has also fallen in concert, to -101%.

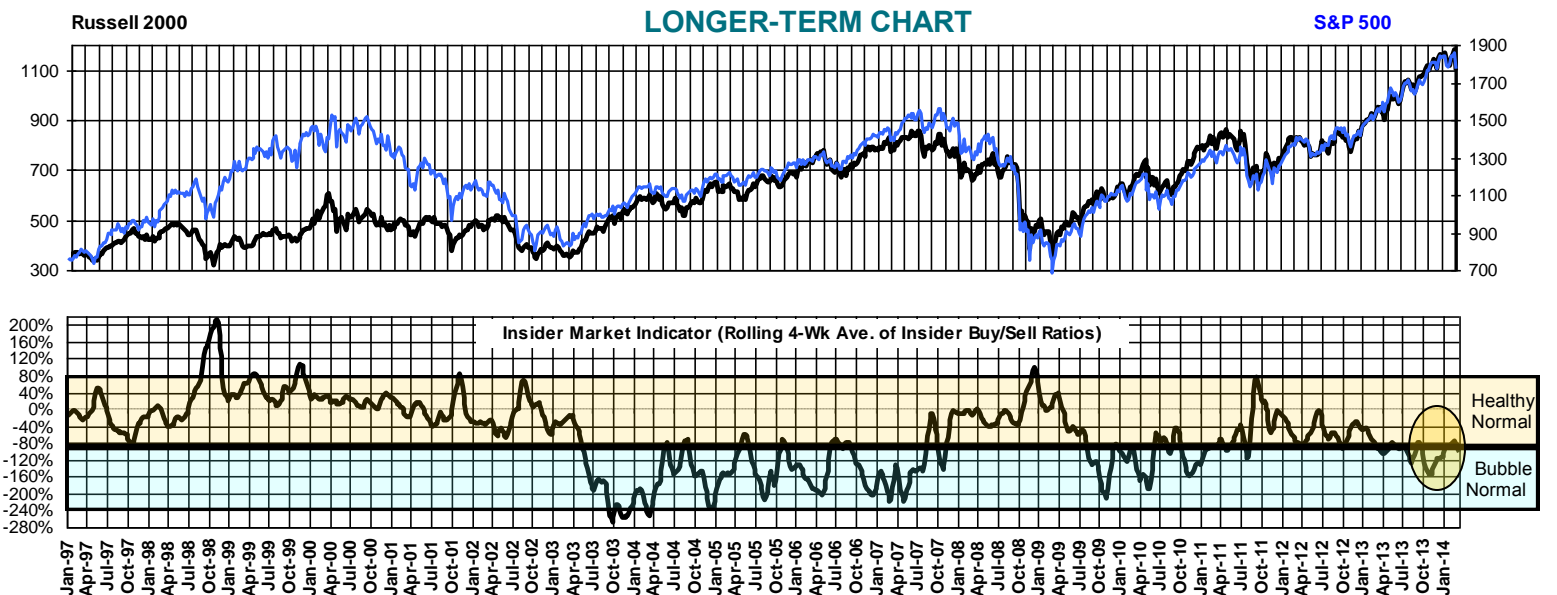

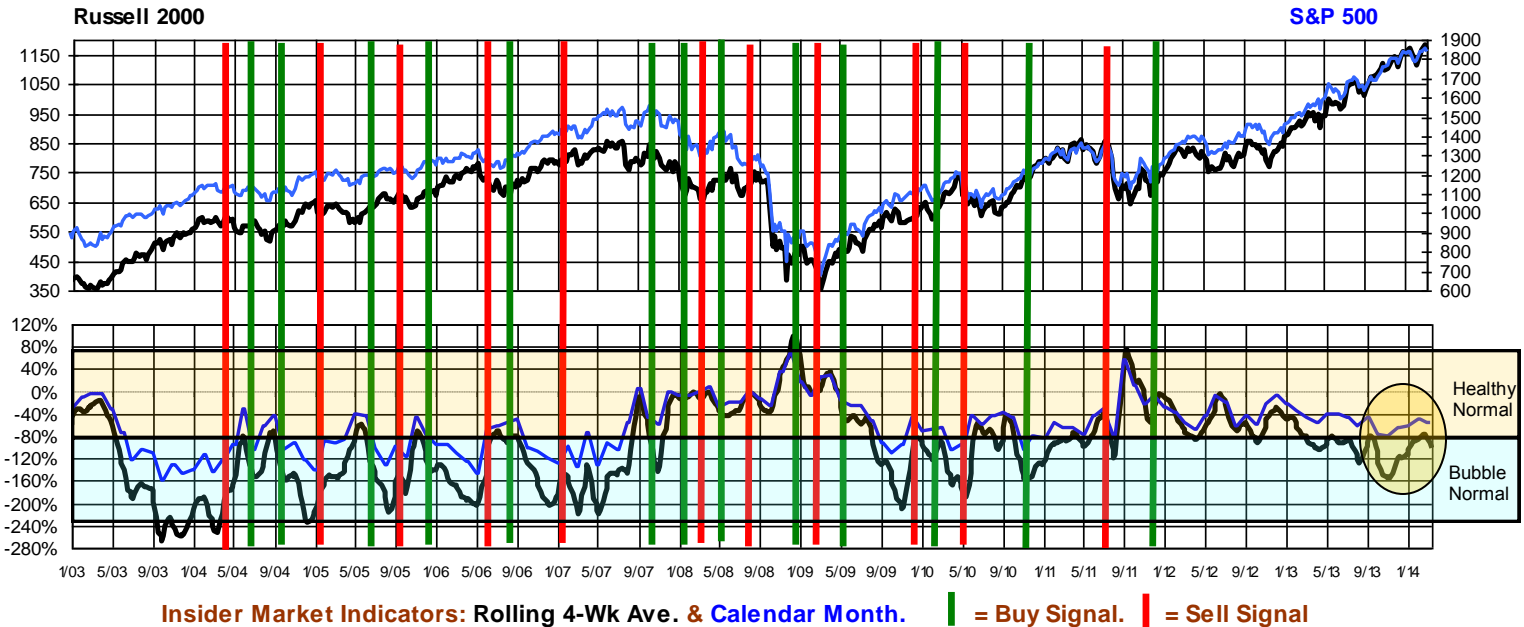

This more normal behavior of our Indicator (eg. moving down as the market moves up) is not troubling in and of itself. But it is a much less positive sign than we have been receiving from insiders since last fall. As we've pointed out in recent issues, both the market and our Indicator have moved generally northward together for months now. And the fact that insiders have been buying this rally has allowed us to correctly stay bullish even as the hand wringing about the age of the current bull run picked up.

So insiders returning to their norm by (finally) selling the current rally more noticeably definitely lessens our bullish sentiment. But that is not the same as becoming bearish. Insiders selling rallies can continue for many weeks until both trends reverse.

That said, being incrementally less bullish makes us more sensitive to factors—like currency crises—that can kill investor confidence and market rallies. And with China and Russia joining the list of governments competing to manage their currencies even more overtly than the U.S. has, one potential trigger of future market turmoil is easy to identify.

Time Period	# Firms With Open-Market Purchases	# Firms With Open-Market Sales	Weekly Buy/Sell Ratio	Rolling 4-Week Average
Week Ending 2/28/14	295	705	-139%	-101%
Month Ending 2/28/14	862	1,343	-56%

The Product includes a list of stocks chosen by Mr. Moreland in accordance with his stated investment strategy. Your actual results may differ from results reported for the list for many reasons, including, without limitation: (i) performance results for the list do not reflect actual trading commissions that you may incur; (ii) performance results for the list do not account for the impact, if any, of certain market factors, such as lack of liquidity, that may affect your results; (iii) the price of stocks chosen for the list may change in a short period of time, and although the "purchase" or "sale" of a stock on the list will not be affected on the list until confirmation that the email alert has been sent to all subscribers, delivery delays and other factors may cause the price you obtain to differ substantially from the price at the time the alert was sent; and (iv) the prices of stocks on the list at the point in time you begin subscribing to the Product may be higher than such prices at the time such stocks were chosen for inclusion on the list. Past results are not necessarily indicative of future performance.
