NEW RECOMMENDATIONS

Stocks added to our Recommended List.

We are in a seasonally strong period for insider filings being made at the SEC. Companies' September quarters are in the books, and trading windows tend to be open for executives through mid December.

With more Form 4s being filed, of course, it's more important than ever to weed out the truly "significant" insider signals from the increased volume of time-wasting noise. That's what our "Ratings of Latest Insider Purchases & Sales" tables (starting on Page 5) are for.

Still, we advocate using our InsiderInsights Company Ratings as an efficient and profitable first screen to determine where you focus your subsequent research. And so it is that we are again not adding an energy name to our Recommended List this issue, despite the fact that stocks in the sector again generated a good many "Significantly Bullish" Ratings last week (again, See Page 5).

We have offered our maxim before that "insiders tend to be early, but they tend to be right". That is particularly true in energy stocks. We absolutely expect to pick up several energy positions sometime in the future. But right here, right now, buying into just about any of the energy companies is too much a bet on the price of the underlying commodity.

Which is to say that if you think oil can stabilize around its present price of $80 a barrel. all of the insider-bought energy stocks are good bets right now. But if you think oil is set for another leg down, investors (and usually persistent energy insiders) will get a notably better buying opportunity in energy shares perhaps in a matter of weeks.

If any client feels absolutely sure that oil has bottomed, insiders have given you more than enough names to make that bet with. We are not certain. We are further aware that energy insiders have gotten the bottom wrong themselves in the past-most memorably back in 1997, when they were nearly two years early (yes, we are that old).

So we remain on the sidelines with the group, even as we absolutely believe in North American energy independence as a long-term investment thesis. We would rather lose some upside by buying after a bottom has more obviously formed in this sector, than risk getting in way too early. With the fate of the underlying commodity so unknown, it is not even safe to rely on present measures of value in individual energy stocks to guide your entry point. Sentiment can change a "value" play in this sector into a "deep value" stock in a session in this environment.

We thank insiders for putting energy stocks on our watch list. What we're watching for now are better underlying technicals.

RECOMMENDED LIST

Independent research opinions on stocks I have invested in, after using insider data as a first screen to determine where to focus our fundamental research. The weekly performance of my Recommended List is calculated by averaging the weekly performances of all the positions on the List. Buy and Short-rated stocks are counted as full positions. Hold-rated stocks are counted as half positions. The weekly performance of our List is then further adjusted for the percentage of Cash we are recommending.

NEW RECOMMENDATIONS

Stocks added to our Recommended List.

after its latest indignity. Instead of reflexively cheerleading with insignificant acquisitions earlier in the weakness, management appears to be making a real value call. (See a snapshot of XXXX' insider history on Page 3.)

There is also a unanimity of opinion. Ten executives and directors bought XXXX's gap down between November 11th and 13th for between $11.26 ad $12.43 a share. Six of the ten increased their direct holdings by 8% or more with their purchases. Also important: seven in the insider buying cluster have also traded XXXX well in the past.

Most on the sell side are thoroughly underwhelmed by XXXX right now—and understandably so. Even the relatively bullish Mr. Jansen at Raymond James can only muster a target of just $14 on the stock after Q3—down from his previous target of $18.

Average estimates for XXXX have decline as well. But it's worth noting that estimated EPS of 31 cents this year is expected to increase by 50%, to 47 cents, in 2015.

There may indeed be no big hurry to enter XXXX. The company's Q4 earnings release is months away from being a potential upside catalyst. But insiders have sent a Significantly Bullish signal in a stock that is nearly 40% off its yearly highs—yet still on path to meet management's longerterm goals. The low-risk/moderate-return we conclude for XXXX appears to us to be part of a longer-term, higher-return investment thesis as well.

COMPANY UPDATES

Updated research on past recommendations.

Xxxxxxx Xxxxxxx (XXXX)
Reiterating Buy Rating.
Recommended: 5/30/14 @ $25.71
Previously Updated: 9/8/14
11/14/14 Price: $33.81

Performance: +31.5% Wks Held: 24

Shares of Xxxxxxx Xxxxxxx have traded flat since its Q3 release on October 30. But the company's revenue and earnings growth prospects remain strong. So does the technical strength of its stock's price chart. XXXX is still a Buy.

Xxxxxxx Xxxxxxx makes xxxxxxx's that xxxxxxxxx various non-liquid products in North America, Latin America, and the Middle East.

As expected, Xxxxxxx's deliveries ramped up into its seasonally strong second half of the year. The company delivered 2,354 Xxxxxxx in Q3, up sharply from 1,635 units in Q2. Management confirmed its goal of shipping 7,000 Xxxxxxxx this year, which means Q4 deliveries are expected to be at least 2,258.

Strong order flow resulted in backlog increasing from 8,493, to over 13,000, valued at around $1.1 billion. This gives excellent visibility for 2015 to be yet another solid year of growth for Xxxxxxx.

Q3 revenues increased 150% year-over-year, to $190.3 million. EPS went from an 8 cent loss last year, to $0.53.

Q4 is only expected to be flat sequentially, and perhaps even a tad below Q3 in terms of EPS. This expected pause in sequential momentum is likely why XXXX has merely trading sideways since Q3 was released. But estimates for next year have now been raised handily due to Xxxxxxxx's backlog figures. Revenues for this boring old manufacturer are now expected to increase over 40% in 2015, to around $820 million. EPS is expected to more than quadruple, form 50 cents this year, to $2.20 next.

While this growth highly visible, it is not too late to buy into this solid turnaround story. The stock already looks a bit oversold to us, trading slightly below its rising 50-day moving average. And if XXXX did break down, we would be very surprised if its 200-day moving average did not catch it.

XXXX's insider profile is old at this point, and neither bullish not bearish. The insider buying that got us looking at Xxxxxxx's shares is long past, and one insider sold a few months ago.

But insiders did their job. We have a solid 30% plus gain in XXXX in 24 weeks. This is the type of solidly positive performance that is the bread and butter of our Recommended List's outperformance. And though this stock may now be outside the "fishing hole" of insider sentiment we hooked it in, this catch still has life based on its fundamental prospects. XXXX remains an excellent Buy.

Mercer International (MERC) Taking Profits.

Recommended: 8/1/14 @ $10.05 Previously Updated: 8/4/14 11/14/14 Price: $13.51

Performance: +34.4% Wks Held: 15

Mercer is yet another boring sounding investment that insiders correctly steered us towards. Shares of this pulp manufacturing company looked rather mundane after like-wise looking Q2 results were posted last August. But a positively boffo Q3 caught everyone by surprise—except insider Peter Kellogg, that is.

And us, we might add. Even though

Mr. Kellogg didn't have much of a track record in MERC, the range of bullish insider filer statistics we could see on his other 8 InsiderInsights Scorecards generated a "Significantly Bullish" InsiderInsights Rating on MERC based on his buys alone.

Mercer blew away its Q3 EPS expectations of 19 cents by posting $1.37 instead. Operating EBITDA more than doubled, to $67.6 million. The large year-over-year increases are testament to the leverage Mercer's business has when metrics move its way. Yes, there were near record pulp sales due to strong demand in Europe and China, increased pricing and a favorable currency translations. Energy sales (a by product of pulp-making) also increased.

But that resulted in "only" a 12.0% increase in total sales, to $301.6 million. Slightly lower unit fiber costs and flat overhead expense allowed virtually all of Mercer's $31 million year-over-year increase in revenue to hit its operating income line.

That's just fabulous. So much so, that we are frankly wondering what Mercer can do for an encore. While EPS estimate expectations for this year were rocketed from 56 cents, to $2.08, estimates for next year were "only" increased from 61 cents to $1.08. How will MERC trade expecting lower EPS next year?

Mercer's is a lumpy business, and we just experienced a very friendly lurch. We would feel greedy expecting another such bump next quarter—especially with recent growth stats out of Europe and China less than satisfying. So we are taking our quick profit in MERC, and will keep our eye on this stock in case another opportunistic buying opportunity arises. If so, we expect Mr. Kellogg, to let us know.

INSIDE THE MARKET

Our Interpretation of Insiders' Top-Down Sentiment.

Our market commentary remains virtually unchanged, and we could not be happier. It's a good week when we can focus on stock-specific issues and not a change in secular factors. It still appears correct to have ignored the "sky-is-falling" crowd, and to buy October's panic and rebound. It is very satisfying that our Insider-Based Market Indicator again helped us to stay the course.

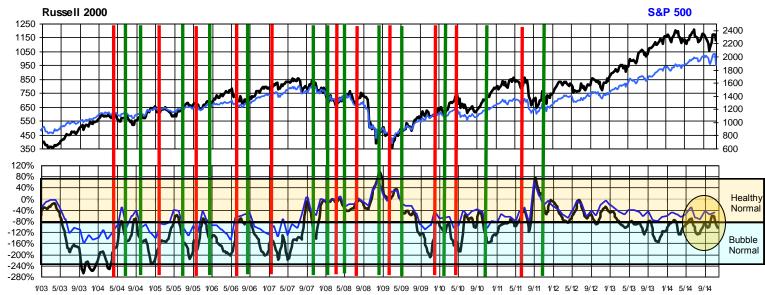

The absolute level of our Insider-Based Market Indicator (See yellow ovals in Charts below) is still not obviously bearish relative to where it has fallen during this (ongoing) financial crisis. And insiders have acted very normally this year—selling strength & buying weakness most weeks.

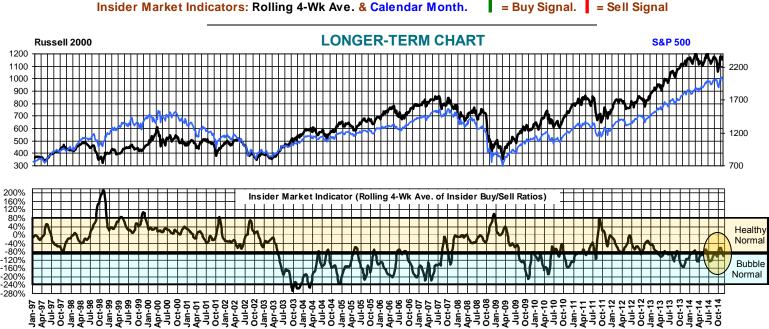

The fact that our Indicator has not moved in an obviously bearish fashion has allowed us to (correctly) stay leaning mostly or all long for a very long time. The last major signal generated was all the way back in the fall of 2011, as indicated by the green vertical "Buy" bar on the Chart below.

We are not perma-bulls. But we remain partial to the trite, but (we think) true arguments that U.S. equities represent a relatively attractive asset class compared to global alternatives. The U.S. economy is showing more growth and stability than other regions, and we further expect money to move out of fixed income as the (hard-to-time) end of the bull market in U.S. bonds grows nearer.

Earnings trends are decent, and valuations not overstretched. There is really no need to over think why U.S. equities remain attractive. After buying October's dip, we are fully invested long.
